In this section, you will be able to order books for classes, print out the entire list of classes and the times they are offered (This is helpful for planning your schedule), and see which courses have petition seats available. Petition seats are a way of reserving spaces in a course, i.e. for majors and minors. Students can request admittance to the course by submitting a form available in the registrar's office or on the registrar's portal page.

OK

There will often be multiple pages of courses available so make sure to explore those as well.

Title Principles of Macroeconomics

Course Section Number EC-101-A

Description This course is an introduction to the macroeconomic approach to economic analysis. Students learn how to measure and interpret: Gross Domestic Product (GDP), unemployment and price levels through a discussion of fundamental economic concepts and the role of markets. We examine macroeconomic instability through a study of causes and policy prescriptions from two major opposing schools of thought: Classical and Keynesian. We continue with a study of money, interest rates and the Federal Reserve. Current economic problems and policy debates including economic controversies on the role of international trade, monetary and fiscal policy, the deficit, economic growth, and productivity are also highlighted.

LSC: Social and Institutional.

SPRING 2019: EC-101-D is restricted to Honors Program students only.
