PRACTICUM

Practicum provides special education and ML candidates who are pursuing an additional endorsement and a master's degree the opportunity to design, implement, and evaluate instruction under the supervision of a licensed teacher. Candidates who are working teachers are able to complete a job-embedded practicum. Along with working in the schools, endorsement candidates take additional coursework intended to deepen their knowledge base and strengthen their skills. The classes explore theoretical frameworks and methods and provide the opportunity to examine issues raised through the practicum experience. As a community of learners, candidates and their instructors address the themes of creativity, curiosity, contemplation, collaboration, reflection, and equity through topics such as antiracist teaching, trauma-informed practice, classroom culture, standards-based lesson and unit planning, instructional strategies, and assessment. Candidates develop skills together to reflect on their teaching and design their professional development trajectory.

A TRANSFORMATIVE CAPSTONE EXPERIENCE

GED 691: Personalized Inquiry: Finding Your Why (2 credits)

This mission-driven seminar will run concurrently with the Student Teaching Seminar and conclude with a week-long immersion in a personalized inquiry project. Using research as well as interviews and observations with teacher-leaders and educational change agents, students will investigate an area of burgeoning passion that will provide a foundation for their professional vision. The course will emphasize professional learning, ethical practice, leadership, and collaboration, as students dig deeply into a question or topic that sparked their interest during student teaching. This intensive seminar will culminate in a "Finding Your Why" Summit where students will share their findings in a variety of formats including TED Talks, digital storytelling, visual arts, multimedia exhibits, and creative writing.

The MAT offers initial licensure tracks in art, elementary, middle, secondary, or special education and additional endorsements in early childhood education, Multilingual Learners (ML), and special education.

Whichever you choose, you'll have a breadth of opportunities, materials, experiences and professional mentoring to enhance your teaching career.
